THE BARD RUNS HIS FAMOUS RIVAL OFF HIS LEGS AT LAST.

Boners Even at the Close of Four Great Battles-Capt. Brawn's Filly Sunbeam Wins the Elizabeth Stakes-Favorites in the Ascendant at Manmouth Yesterday.

Troubadour, winner of the Suburban of 1886, will probably never race again. His great rival, The Bard, met him for the fourth time resterday, and ran him off his legs. It was the fourth battle between these glants of the turf. Their matches have been the sensational events of the season. Honors are even between them. They were both famous race horses when they met for the first time on June 21, this year, at Sheepshead Bay, in the Coney Island Stakes, at a mile and one-eighth. The Bard won easily by three lengths, in 1:15. Their next race was on July 4, at Mon-mouth, in the Ocean Stakes, the same distance as the Coney Island Stakes. Trou-badour won in 1:56%, which, taking the track into consideration, was fully as cred-itable as The Bard's 1:55 at the Bay. This defeat of The Bard, after he had won the June odal and the St. James Stakes at the Brooklyn Joekey Club's course, and the Coney Island Stakes and the Cup at Sheepshead Bay, was a crushing blow to the backers of The Bard, and sepecially so to his owner, who had departed for Europe while his colt was achieving an unbroken series of victories in his superb fouryear-old form. Ten days later the rivals faced each other again in the race for the Monmouth Cup, at a mile and three-quarters. As in the previous stakes, they were alone in the race Troubsdour finished, with The Bard at his flank, in 3:04. Troubadour was one race ahead

The announcement in yesterday's Sun that the horses would meet again in the Freehold Stakes, at a mile and a half, and that Capt. Brown was coming on from Pittsburgh to see he race and back his horse, drew a crowd to Monmouth that Assistant Secretary Croft, who superintends the gates, said amounted to more than 10,000.

The immense throng had its appetite sharpened by two races before the horses appeared for the event of the day. This time the rivals had game old Barnum for company. After prehad game old Barnum for company, Arter preliminary canters, in which The Bard did not appear in prime racing condition, and Troubadour loped out with his fore legs bandaged in red flannel, while Barnum moved like a racer fit for work, the horses came out for the race.
Troubadour was the first to appear. His legs were clean. A trained eye could see that his off fore leg was swollen, and that he favored it slightly while proceeding to the post. He was applauded warmly while passing the stand,

Barnum received double the applause sent out to the horse that had defeated The Bard. The Bard appeared at the post on the backstretch unheraided.

The trio made one breakaway before they were sent off in the race. In the opening strides Barnum led The Bard two lengths. Troubadour trailing a length in the rear. Contrary to his custom with Troubadour, Garrison sent the horse to set the pace in the first furiong. He passed The Bard and Barnum on the turn, and at a quarter led The Bard by a length. Barnum running a length in the rear. The three strung out on the run up the straight in the second quarter. Troubadour passing the stand two lengths ahead of The Bard, with Barnum three lengths behind. The Bard closed the gap on the turn for the backstretch, and half lapped Troubadour at the quarter post, three-quarters of a mile from the start. Barnum was then four lengths in the rear. The trio ran in this shape to the far turn, where The Bard reached Troubadour's head, and in a few strides Hayward had the red, white, and blue colors of Mr. Cassatt a shade in the lead. Then arose loud cries of "The Bard is beating him!" But Troubadour ran alongside of The Bard into the head of the stretch, when he began to lag. The Bard kept up the pace, opening a gap as he approached the stand, while Fitzpatrick, on Barnum, was fast overtaking Troubadour. The shouting was now terrific, cries of "The Bard increased the gap in the last furions, at the beginning of which Barnum came second, three lengths in front of Troubadour. The Bard was the treath of the dull, dead track. The first quarter was run in 26%; half, 54; three-quarters, 1:21%; mile 1:46%; mile and a quarter, 2:15; mile and a half, 2:59%.

Garrison said that he felt that his horse was gone at the head of the stretch. Troubadour was so lame when he came in that he could hardly walk. Mr. Duffy, manager for Capt. Brown, informed a Bux reporter that Troubadour would never race again. His owner had desided to send him home as soon as practicable.

the trace at the trace, and large amounts were wagered on the race in all racing centres. Capt. Brown bet about $1,000 on his horse. There were no plungers present, and the bookmakers longed in vain for the appearance of Pittsburgh Phil, who, reports say, has made fabulous sums out of Western and Baratoga bookmakers, and has journeyed to Monmouth to try his luck.

Every available place was occupied when seven three-year-old fillies started for the Elizabeth Stakes at a mile and a furiong, with about $2,000 to the winner. Capt. Sam Brown's Sunbeam daughter of Hindoo, was a strong favorite, although she had started only once this season, and that was in a selling race at the Brooklyn Jockey Club's spring meeting, in which she finished fourth. Oakwood Stable's fast filly Connemara carried ten pounds more than Sunbeam, the favorite having only 103 pounds on her back. The weight was too light for Garrison, so Church had the mount. He sent the filly in the lead while the flag was failing. She passed into the even mile half a length shead of White Squall. Sunbeam shook herself clear of White Squall. Sunbeam shook herself clear of White Squall at the head of the backstretch, where she took the track for the race, and was never approached, Church landing her winner by six lengths in a canter. Tarbouche getting second place a length shead of Connemara. Every available place was occupied when bouche getting second place a length shead of Connemara.

Ten juveniles joined in the opening scurry of three-quarters of a mile for a handicap sweepstakes for two-year-olds. Judging from the bookmakers' slates, Mr. Walden's bay filly Omaha, daughter of Tom Ochiltree, was the only entry worthy of consideration. Hayward rode the favorite, Getting away in the front rank, he held the filly in a safe position, while ferenader, Slumber, and Clontarf out out the work at the head of the cluster until well along the homestretch, into which Slumber had shown the way. Hayward made the issue in the closing furlong, Omaha sweeping in handly and winning the race by a length. Long Branch followed the winner out and won the place half a length shead of Slumber.

The free handicap sweepstakes for horses that had not won this year was characterized by one of the closest finishes of the year. Pontioo, the favorite, and Belvidere, who ranked even with Duplex as second choice, ran out from the bunch along the homestretch, the race having been remarkably close from the start. Neck and neck they came in the final 100 yards. Pontico winning by a nose only from Belvidere.

Beven started and made a good run in the selling race, for which Grenadler was favorite and Editor second choice. Miss Mouse held the van along the backstretch and around the far turn into the homestretch, where Editor put in his claims and outfooted the favorite winning two lengths shead of Miss Mouse and Grenadler. Miss Mouse beating Grenadler by a nose for second place. There was no bid for the winner.

nose for second place. There was no bid for the winner.

The hurdle race was a straggling sort of a chase, Mara sending Referee, the favorite, out at the head of the hunt from flagfall. Reeping there to the finish he won by an open length, Soudan second, and Sam Emery third, two lengths apart. Talleyrand fell in front of the stand, rolling over his rider, Grace, apparently crushing him; but the jockey escaped serious injury.

Their Ball Came at the Pole Grounds Will Give Her $650-The Elks' Battle. When Gus Heckler takes tickets he wears white flannel suit. That, at least, was what he had on yesterday afternoon when, with Henry Green and Charley French, he stood at the east gate of the Polo grounds and demanded quarters and halves of everybody that came in. And there were lots of people that came in, oo, including everybody that has anything to do with the New York theatre, and a goodly number of folks from other places, among whom was Miss Ella Chapiain, who didn't cross the ocean especially for this treat, but attend ed, nevertheless. The occasion was a base ball match, in which every twirler and muffer and slugger was a player. Pretty Miss Rachel Booth was the cause of it all, as she has been To-day Mesers, Mark Smith, De Wolf Hopper, and E. Rosenbaum, who were the committee and E. Rosenbaum, who were the committee, will hand her the snug sum of $650 as a token of the New York boys good will.

It was a great game. De Wolf Hopper captained the "Ah Theres," who consisted, besides himself, of Harry Clark, Digby Bell, W. E. Simpson, John Russell, Clark Sammis, John Sullivan, Leander Richardson, and Joe Mack. The "Stay Theres," under the command of Bob Hilliard, who pitched and fought the umpire. were Joe Quinn, Forest Robinson, Jeff George, J. F. Harley, Walter Collier, Frank Lane, Arthur Thomas, and Joe Frankau. Everybody played in turn at every position, in order, as Official Scorer Mark Smith said, to give everybody a chance to make errors. Scorer Smith didn't keep account of these errors because he brought only one five-ream book with him. Every player was rigged in a base-ball suit and there weren't two suits allke on the field. Joe Mack, in a blue-striped shirt, red stockings, and white cap, was probably the gayest, but even this costume paled somewhat alongside of Bob Hilliard's coat and eap of all the colors in the rainbow.

Dan Hart was umpire, and Nick Engle sup-

white cap, was probably the gayest, but even this costume paled somewhat alongside of Bob Hilliard's coat and cap of all the colors in the rainbow.

Dan Hart was umpire, and Nick Engie supplied the beer, the appearance of which eliqited a shout from De Wolf Hopper Joud enough to be heard at Coney Island. Frank Lane, for the "Stay Therea," worried the men around the bases; and Frank Lane knows how, for he has been a League umpire.

The first inning was marked by two things: The first was the fly which Leander Richardson ran right under and didn't touch at all, and the second was the graceful but emphatic way in which Jeff George sat down on second base. The "Stay Theres" scored two runs, and the "Ah Theres" nothing but a goose egg, in spite of the eight-inch sunflower that De Wolf Hopper wore as a mascot. Umpire Dan Hart caught it from first to last Hilliard quoted rules, and flung the book at him. Hopper fanned his face with a handkerchief, and wiped his brow, while the other seventeen shook their fists at him. Finally Gus Heckler brought a policeman on the field, and Dan Hart recovered.

Harry Clark immortalized himself with two home runs. Digby Bell made a three-bagger. The unpire, to be sure, said he never would have got to first if Short-stop George hadn't fielded the ball over the fence, but Capt. Hopper said it was a three-bagger, and therefore, of course, it was. At the close of the six innings De Wolf Hopper's nine said "Ah There," and Bob Hilliard's nine decided to stay right there, for the score was this:

Ah There.

DIED A COWARDLY DEATH.

FREDERICK HORTON KILLS HIMSELS IN A DESPONDENT FIT. His Relations with a Young Girl Have Something to do with his Trouble-Con-fleting Stories as to his Conduct.

Frederick Osborn Horton, age 27 years, the son of Benjamin DeWitt Horton, a wealthy resident of Brooklyn, committed suicide early yesterday morning in his father's house at 223 Clermont avenue, by shooting himself in the head. Young Horton received a good education, but had never engaged in any steady business. He lived with his father, and was liberally supplied with spending money.

When the roller skating craze was at its height a couple of years ago, Horton was a constant visitor at a rink in Clermont avenue, and there made the acquaintance of a pretty young lady, who had the reputation of being the most expert roller skater of the Hill. He became very ardent in his attentions to her.

Wednesday evening, after being out of the house until 11 o'clock, he went to his bedroom on the third floor, adjoining that of his grandmother. The latter heard him go down stairs. As she did not hear him return she became alarmed and notified his father, who found his son lying dead on the celler floor, face downward, in a pool of blood, and with a bullet wound in his right forehead. It was at first supposed that it was a case of murder, but on turning over the body a 82-calibre revolver of the "Hardpan" pattern was found underneath and close to the right hand. One chamber was empty. Beside the body were found the coat and vest of the dead man rolled up in a neat bundle, and on top of them his gold watch and chain and a letter addressed to his father. In his bedroom there were found the fragments of a letter, which Capt. McKelvey pusted together on a sheet of paper, and which made out of it the following:

Dear Farmer: Forgive me if I should ever do as I feel and there made the acquaintance of a pretty

DEAR FATERS: Forgive me if I should ever do as I feet inclined to do this morning, and that is nothing more or backers and taking this worthless life of mine into my own hands and disposing of it as the feeling of this moment may come. * * for you have indeed been a kind, good, indulgent father to me. * I shall nothing more than fend remembrance. * * Any favor you may grant my beautiful little * * Believe me in The

The contents of the letter found in the basement Mr. Horton refused to reveal to the public, saying that it was evident that his son had committed suicide while suffering from fatal despondency. "My beautiful little" referred to in the letter found in the bedroom is believed to be the young woman whose acquaintance the young mau made in a skating rink. Coroner Rooney will hold the inquest to-morrow.

quaintance the young man made in a skating rink. Coroner Booney will hold the inquest to-morrow.

It came out last night that the girl is Eva Keppel, the young daughter of Henry Keppel of 75 Clermont avenue. She is said to still in short dresses, but well developed, with dark hair, brilliant dark eyes, and rosy cheeks. She was called the Queen of the Palace Rink in which she used to skate. Horton used frequently to skate with her there, and, after the skating craze died out, they were seen together almost every evening walking arm in arm in the neighborhood of Fort Greene. Horton's attentions are said to have been discouraged by the girl's parents, and he seldom called at her home until after the death of her mother, when he began to call more frequently, and Eva told her father and brother that he was engaged to marry her.

A police official, who has worked out the case, said last night:

oase, said last night:

It is a very said affair for the girl. Horton gained her affection and recently she has wanted him to marry her, but he put her off from time to time. They have had several alorany interviews recently, and florton saw Evaluate on Wednesday night.

The letter which for some second of his relations to Eva, and a dying request that she be cared for.

The letter which Horion's father would not show, I am told, contained a confession of his relations to Eva. and a dying request that she be cared for.

It is said that Eva is a limost distracted, and it is feared may lose her reason entirely. Mr. Keppel said last night:

My daughter and Mr. Horton had been acquainted for more than a year. They were introduced by my son. Mr. Horton was a fraquent visitor to the house, but I did not think seriously of his attentions to Eva, who is a mere child, being only it years old. He called on Eva yesterday afternoon, and he was at the house again last night. After spending some time with Eva he camedown stairs and told me that he had something of importance to say. He then declared that he loved Eva, and made a proposition of marriage. He said he say ready to marry the control of the control of the satisfactory to me. I was surprised, and at once rejected the offer. I had previously known that he had spoken of marriage to my daughter, but this was the first time he made a formal preposition to me. I told him that my daughter was too young to think of marriage, and that her age was at present an insurmountable amatch, as he had no regular employment, and was entirely dependent on his parents for support. He pleaded with me, but I refused to withdraw my objections. He then went away, apparently all broken up and dejected. It is not true that his relations with my daughter were ever improper.

TACTICS OF THE BEARS.

tle, but they Start Fresh Hopes of Ruin. The circular of Secretary Fairchild offering to disburse some $42,000,000 of the country's surplus money from the Treasury, providing the bondholders will take it, caused a moderate burst of bull enthusiasm in Wall street yesterday. There was a general canvass of the street for opinions as to what would be the actual effect of the Treasury programme, and the leading bankers interviewed pretty generally agreed that the chances were against the disbursement of much money by the Treasury under its new plan unless the money market became very stringent. It was also pretty generally agreed that the moral effect would be good, because it would encourage people to go ahead with their business, feeling safe that the Government was disposed to do all it can toward the promotion of general prosperity.

safe that the Government was disposed to do all it can toward the promotion of general prosperity.

In its eagerness to act upon this piece of good news, and discount it as far as possible in the stock market, the street did not overlook the news from San Francisco about the collapse of the California wheat deal. This deal is not as large as the Chicago deal, but appears to have been about as disastrous proportionately. The men who have been engineering it are said to be the accredited agents of the Bank of Nevada, and that bank is known to have had close connections with the deal, hence reports that the bank was involved were natural, and there is doubtless some bais for them. At the agency of the Bank of Nevada in this city the reports were denied. About all the business the agency transacts is in sterling and San Francisco exchange. To one of its large customers the agency offered to cancel a contract for sterling if the customer or his clients felt any hesitation about taking the bills. The Bank of Nevada is practically a private concern, though an incorporated institution. John W. Mackay and his partner, J. C. Flood, own all of the capital except 250 shares, which are held by the Vice-President and active manager of the bank. They have threatened several times to wind up their banking business. The agency in this city is largely Mr. Mackay's private office, and its business is not extensive.

several times to wind up their banking business. The agency in this city is largely Mr. Mackay's private office, and its business is not extensive.

Upon the Stock Exchange there was some lively climbing for stocks the first half hour, especially by the smaller bears who did not desert the bear ranks on Wednesday. Some of the big ones said in substance that it was only a shower, and that they were glad to have the opportunity to sell some more stocks at the higher range of values. Some of them disdained the suggestion that it might be time to cover their shorts. It leaked out yesterday that the office of the most pretentious of the bear campaigners was short of fully 4,000 shares of Consolidated Gas. This stock seems to be a favorite short saie with the fleedlings.

In the afternoon the market began to react and the floating contingent went for prices again, meeting with fair success, which was due partly to a fresh crop of unsavory rumors from the bear camp. They doubtless referred to the collapse of the Calfornia wheat deal and to the leves complications. In these last there seemed to be little new.

As a fair sample of the present bear tacties, the following incident came to the surface yesterday afternoon: A well-known trader was hammering the life out of New York and New England, when one of his friends asked him to confide in him the reason for the sales he was making. He replied that the preferred stock—which, by the way, is dealt in only in Boston—had declined to 100. The recipient of this information, doubting its correctness, asked a Boston house to confirm it, and found that New England preferred had not sold below 106, and was then 107 bid. He entightened his friend, who was selling the stock, and received the reply that all he knew about the decline was what Commodre so-and-so, naming Mr. Dick Murphy's partner, had told him.

The only good rumor current yesterday, and, as usual, it slacked confirmation, was the verge of sottlement. Western Union has been worked so many times upon the strength of th

THURSDAY, Aug. 4.

The good feeling that began to develop in and about the Stock Exchange yesterday became more pronounced to-day. This was due chiefly to the announcement of the programme of the Treasury Department. The policy of the department appears to meet with general approval. While it is argued that not much money will be disbursed in prepayment of interest, the chances are that is any financial emergencies should arise a fair amount of bonds will be offered for the requirements of the sinking fund. Any way, the fact that the Treasury has shown a disposition to disgorge itself has, and undoubtedly will continue to have, a reassuring effect in regard to the money

The good news was to an extent offset by the unfavorable rumors growing out of the col-lapse of the California wheat clique and by the action of the Bank of England in advancing its rate of discount. Still, the upward tenseriously interfered with, and the first prices for stocks were at large gains upon the final figures of yesterday. To the surprise of every one this improvement was maintained until afternoon, and in some cases even better figures were recorded. In the last hour a natural reaction set in, which was emphasized by the traders who were encouraged to raid the list by the leaders in the recent bear campaign.
